Gene Mandarino has been HRValue Group's Management Training Director and Organizational Development Manager since 2002. He brings more than ten years experience in organizational development and training to the HRValue Group team, designing and initiating training and organizational development programs across a wide spectrum of businesses.

Mandarino previously worked as Organizational Development Manager for Arthur Andersen's professional education division in St. Charles, Illinois. There he originated workshops on team leadership, interpersonal communications, mentoring, and effective meetings; he facilitated team development and strategic planning processes; and he implemented performance management programs. His experience also includes designing and conducting programs on supervisory skills, customer relations, leadership, and team problem solving for businesses, municipalities, and colleges as a member of the Denniston Consulting group in Lisle, Illinois.

At HRValue Group, Mandarino works to elevate the performance of credit union teams all across the country, developing and delivering training products and services. His focus is on delivering relevant and meaningful leadership and management training programs.

Professional Organizations & Activities

Mandarino is a member of the South Central Wisconsin Chapter for the Society for Training and Development.

Education

Mandarino holds a master's degree in Organizational Development from Loyola University in Chicago and a bachelor's degree in Business from Denver University.

"Investing in developing your managers will ensure the success of your credit union."
